That budget reflects administrative costs paid directly from the county's mental health fund and estimate of the funds that are to be transferred to the mental health region for next year. Grush related that the county's tax asking from the mental health levy is expected to increase to $233,506, based on funding of $26 per capita. This year's levy totals $199,378 based on funding of $22.20 per capita. Grush pointed out that 80% of Ritter's salary is currently charged to the mental health budget, with the remaining 20% coming from General Assistance. For FY21 the mental health budget will include 97.5% of Ritter's salary and 100% of benefits, while General Assistance will account for 2.5% of the total salary. The change is based upon hours worked by Ritter in each office. No action was taken.

Ritter then presented the proposed General Assistance budget for FY21 and requested the supervisors discuss increasing county cremation reimbursements to funeral homes from the current $900.
